

This novel is not about the nuts and bolts of the construction industry. It is about a young man, named Zebadiah Emmanuel Smith, who was forced out of his home to fend for himself in any way he could.

He started with nothing and worked way to the top. Will his good fortune last, or will he find himself having to start all over again?

Dialog Excerpts: Zeb said, "I know you can't hear me Mom, but I have to say it anyway. It hurts too much for me to keep it in.

"Remember when I was little and you told him about me getting into the refrigerator while he was gone? ..."

"... And then he beat me with it so hard I had to sit sideways in my seat at school for the next two days. It hurt ...

BajaBayBooks.com

$7.99 U.S.

ISBN 0764534718

9 780764 534713

Fiction

The Construction Prison CD

Zan Mann

